Dear Dick:

Re your letter of 14 January 1957 on Project policy on Medical services.

Personnel at overseas bases will receive equal treatment accorded by military services to any civilian employee of the service. This means, in effect, that certain charges would be assessed by a service hospital for care if the injury or disease were determined to be in line of duty; higher charges would be made by the service hospital for injuries or disease determined to be not in line of duty.

The Project has undertaken to make available necessary dental and medical facilities at a minimum cost to the individual. Each individual employee, however, should provide for possible expenses through the medium of private health insurance plans, either through his basic employer or direct subscription. It is not contemplated that this Project would cover charges normally assessed by a service hospital for treating civilian employees of a service component.

Very truly yours,

George
